（配点 50 点）

For many (a)blind people and those with vision difficulties, life (P)[①with ②can ③easier
④be ⑤made] a guide dog. But making a good guide dog takes much work. And for many, the long road begins when the dog is a puppy.

Take for example, the five 8-week old puppies (1) arrived at the Tipton Airport in Fort Meade, Maryland early in February. At that time, they were loving, playful animals – like all puppies. Now however, the Labrador retriever and German shepherd puppies are on the road to becoming useful members of society.

If they prove themselves able, they could become guide dogs. They will help to improve the lives of people with vision loss and vision (b)impairment.

The faithful-friends-to-be are part of a training program of an organization called Guiding Eyes for the Blind. The puppies flew (2) the organization’s head office in Yorktown Heights, New York, to Maryland onboard a “Pilots To The Rescue” flight.

Pilots to the Rescue is a not-for-profit organization that transports “...animals as well as people at risk,” (X)it states on its website.

The puppies were born in Yorktown Heights. And they spent the first two months of their lives with their moms and *siblings. The young dogs were *bred for health and temperament. (Here, “temperament” means how they respond to their environment.)

However, breeding alone will (Q)[①not ②to ③turn ④enough ⑤be] these puppies into guide dogs. They will need training from dog training experts.

They also will need to be (c)nurtured by volunteers called Puppy Raisers. The (3) of this nurturing by Puppy Raisers and their families is to turn the energetic, playful puppies into well-behaved and well-socialized dogs.

These are (i)the qualities needed for a successful guide dog: well-bred, well-trained, well-behaved, and well-socialized.

The process will take about 14 to 16 months of weekly classes and testing. Training starts with the basics: name recognition, behavior, and commands such (4) “sit” and “down.” The trainers then move on to more *complex commands. After that, the puppies are given to the Puppy Raisers. The raisers and their families will show the puppies the world and how to act in (Y)it.

A manager for Guiding Eyes for the Blind’s Puppy Program is Cindy Tait. She told the *Associated Press that other experts will keep a watchful eye on the training and help with any problems the raisers may have along the way.

Once a (d)solid, loving *foundation is in place, puppies must leave their raisers and return to the Guiding Eyes training center for official guide dog training. Formal training is where the dogs (e)demonstrate whether they will become a guide dog for the blind, a different kind of service dog, or someone's pet.

This means there is almost always a tearful goodbye.

Denali is one of four bigger puppies. He was placed aboard a return flight to Guiding Eyes the day the new puppies arrived. Tait got tears in her eyes as she watched Puppy Raiser Carolyn Schaefer say goodbye to the yellow Labrador and walk him to the plane.

“This is the hard part,” Tait said. But she said a guide dog has the power to help people. And that (ii)softens the blow, an expression that means “makes a hard thing easier.”

Even (5) it can be very hard to leave the puppies, puppy raisers come back over and over. Tait herself has raised many. She lists them all: Roxanne, Katrina, Velour, Gus, Mystic, Oregon, Kelby, Tad, Eagle, Winnie, and now Kenji, her 11th future guide dog puppy.

M: The city basketball championship is coming up soon.

S : I know.

M: I hope we can win.

S : Yeah, me too. We have been playing on this team since we started junior high school, and the championship will be our last game together before we go to high school.

M: Yes. (1)

S : Yes.

M: So, if we get into Midori High School, we can play basketball together again.

S : (2)

M: Really? Is it because you'll be too busy with your studies?

S : That's one thing, but I'm also thinking of trying some other sports.

M: Really? Why? You love basketball, right?

S : Of course.

M: Then, let's play basketball together in high school.

S : Mr. Brown told me that in high school, he played soccer in the fall, ice hockey in the winter, and tennis in the spring. (3)

M: But I think it's important to keep doing one sport for a long time to get good at it.

S : That may be true. But you played baseball in elementary school and started playing basketball in junior high school, right?

M: Yes, I did.

S : So, you haven't played basketball for long, but you are very good at it.

M: Thank you for saying that. (4) I am very grateful to my baseball coach for his help.

S : In the same way, I think that if I play a different sport, I will be able to look at basketball from a different perspective.

M: I see.

S : (5)

M: That's good. But let's play basketball together sometimes in high school, too.

S : Of course.
